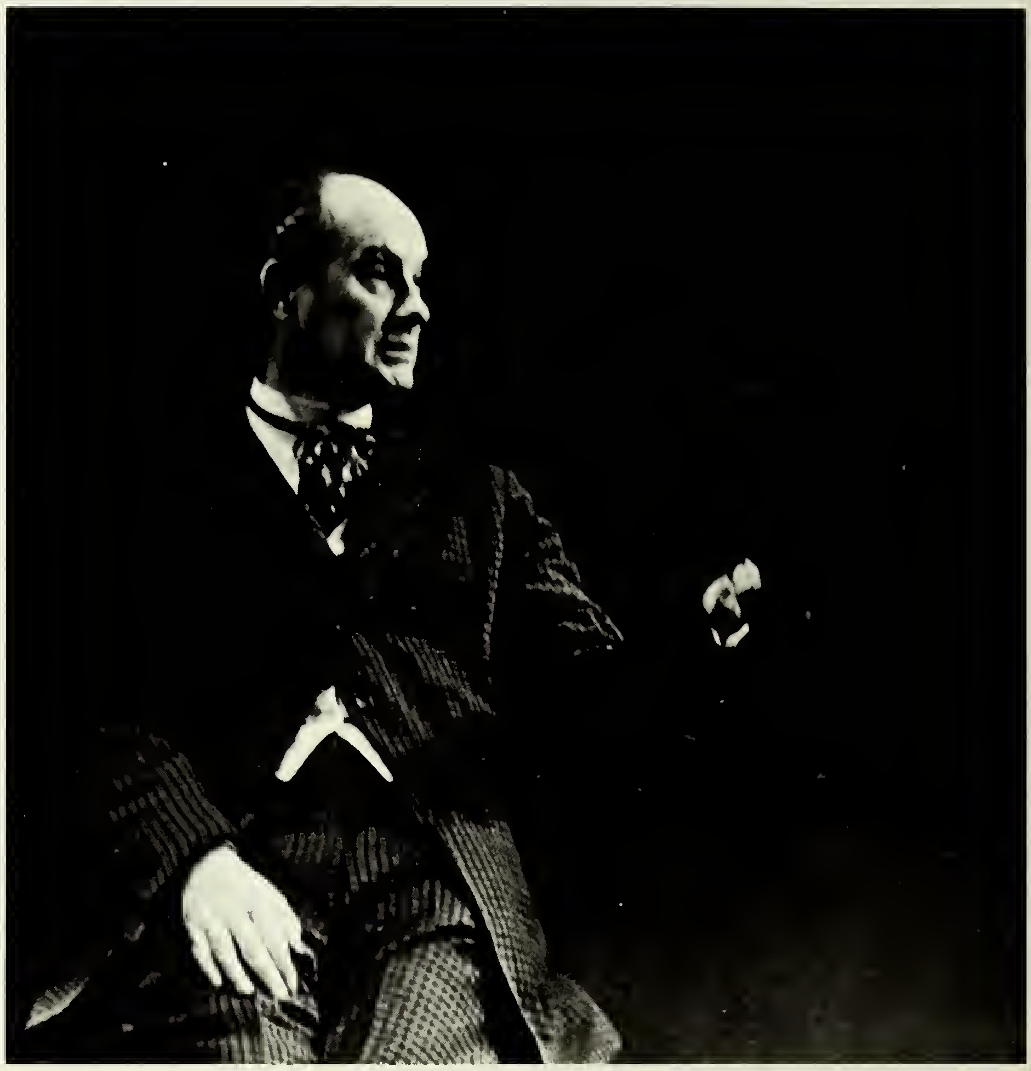
MORTARBOARD

(môr'tar bôrd') n. 1. a square board with a handle beneath, on which mortar is carried by masons 2. an academic cap with a square, flat, horizontal top, worn at commencements, etc. in schools and colleges

VOLUME 90,
BARNARD COLLEGE, 1984

THE 90th VOLUME OF MORTARBOARD KENNETH JANES UPON HIS RETIRE DIRECTOR OF THE MINOR LATHAM



What can I say about Kenneth Janes?

Personally — He has been my counselor, my boss and my friend. He has been someone for me to count on through both good and bad times and he has never failed to listen quietly and patiently.

Professionally — He is an extremely creative and dedicated artist. He is not only a fine actor, but his performance of a music hall song is a unique experience for an audience. He is a superb director and both a witty and touching playwright.

Kenneth Janes came to the United States and Yale University as a fellow with the Rockefeller Foundation. He arrived at Barnard College in 1962. As head of the Minor Latham Playhouse and Director of the Barnard College Theatre Company he has enriched the lives of everyone at Barnard. During the past twenty years he has conducted innumerable workshops and classes. He has directed over one hundred plays which have included one act plays, original works and classics. He has encouraged and assisted performances by many groups in the Barnard-Columbia community.

What can I say about Kenneth Janes? Only that he has constantly given of himself to his students and to all of us at Barnard. On behalf of all of us, I thank him.

"Most colleges start with something tangible: a gift of buildings, an endowment, or at least a tract of land. Barnard College started with nothing except that most irresistible and indestructable thing, an idea."

That description, taken from Marian Churchill White's A History of Barnard College, captures the spirit of Barnard's special mission and identity. In 1889, Frederick A. P. Barnard turned his dream of equal education for women into a reality. Now, nearly one hundred years later, you and I are the benefactors of that dream. Of course, buildings, an endowment and a tract of land have become very much a part of Barnard's current story as well. However, ideas and young women in pursuit of a superb education are still our strongest assets.

As you leave Barnard, you may be assured that your Barnard education will serve you well. You have been equipped, as well as anyone can be, with the intellectual tools, the knowledge and the sensitivities to meet the complex challenges facing the world today. You go forward, as well, as a continuing member of the Barnard community. The Barnard family is large; not only the College itself, but also Barnard alumnae who have preceded you, continue to contribute to the "Barnard experience" and to support each other in their personal and professional endeavors. We hope you will do the same. You are a vital link in perpetuating the tradition which began nearly a century ago with someone's dream.

You are the first class that I have seen through four years so I feel a special closeness to you. I wish for you lives of peace, happiness, good health and personal fulfillment.

Sincerely,

Ellen V Futter

Annette Baxter

Annette Baxter's death this fall was a great shock and loss to the Barnard and Columbia community, as well as to the hundreds of other people whose lives she touched. Professor Baxter was a concerned, intelligent, warm, charming individual, committed to education and devoted to her students. She was always available to talk with students, encourage and inspire them, and have them challenge and develop their ideas and thoughts.

As a great innovator at Barnard, Professor Baxter helped establish the Women's Studies program, and chaired the American Studies department. Her commitment to education was not to be exceeded and her enthusiasm for her subjects pervaded the classes. I recall that each week, when our American Studies seminars officially ended at 4 o'clock, the discussions unofficially continued in corridors, libraries, at dinner tables and in homes. Professor Baxter always welcomed us into her office to clarify thoughts, gain a better understanding of a book or article we had read, or even chat. Whether we knew her from class, or became acquainted with her through committees, or perhaps through the Bulletin or Spectator, she always made herself accessible in whatever ways she could.

Annette Baxter's involvement at Barnard was extensive. While teaching at Barnard for over twenty years, she was involved in over fifty committees such as Columbia's Bicentennial Committee, the Committee on the City, the Women's Center Executive Committee, the Barnard-Columbia Committee of American Historians, the Advisory Council of University Seminars, and numerous others.

Her versatility, the personal interest she took in her students, her love of knowledge, her concern that we challenge ourselves and strive to meet our potential, and her guidance and warmth are just a few of the qualities and characteristics which cause us to miss such a dear friend and mentor, Annette Baxter.

How do you think all this gets done? The answer sits — and sits — and sits — in room 116 McIntosh. That's the office of the Student Government Association and that's where you will surely find Aroza, Judy, Ramona, Jill, and Laurie striving to make life at Barnard exciting and rewarding.

The activities of Student Government are coordinated by a five-member executive board which is chosen through an all-college election. The Executive Board is responsible for coordinating student government, all extracurricular activities and organizations, and administering the Student Activity Fee. However, the most important duty of the Student Government Board is to act as a liaison between the student body and the Barnard administration.

The Barnard-Columbia Center for World Affairs is a campus-based organization which enables students to debate and hear varied opinions on international issues. One forum for debate is Model United Nations Conferences, where students represent different countries in intercollegiated simulations of the UN. Other simulation conferences, such as the Model Organization of American States are also attended. A second forum for debate and discussion is the CWA seminar and lecture series, where students can discuss and hear opinions from prominent journalists, historians, statesmen, and other significant individuals.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton Pre-Law Society

The Elizabeth Cady Stanton Pre-Law Society was founded in the spring of 1981. Since then, the club has helped provide focus and direction to prospective pre-law students. The club invites guest speakers to discuss the legal profession and sponsors student-faculty receptions and luncheons.

The Barnard Literary Magazine consists of: Editor-in-Chief: Kathryn Fernquist-Bosco; Poetry Editor: Nina Solomon; Prose Editor: Diane Moroff; Editorial Board: Laura Malkin, Michele Shapiro, Lisanne Brown, Ellen O'Neil, Susan Bobroff, Mark Rothman, Wendy Long, Leigh Gates, Michelle Sorek, Amy Rugland, Lisa Hunter, Elizabeth Oldman, Julie Caskey, Sylvia Steinert.

The Barnard Literary Magazine is published once a semester and provides an opportunity for student writers to share their fiction and poetry with others. The Magazine also sponsors several open readings every semester, and hosts readings by faculty members and professional writers.

The Columbia-Barnard Course Guide provides students with the information necessary for choosing courses. With tuition costs as high as they are, it is important that the student be aware of what is open to her, and that she make an intelligent choice from among the alternatives. The Course Guide provides this information through reviews based on comments of students who have taken the courses. The reviews also contain a set of numerical ratings based on a 1-10 scale which quantifies these comments. The last piece of information the Course Guide has is contained in our grade charts. These charts show how an instructor grades his or her course. This mix of qualitative and quantitative information provides the student with all the facts she needs to make her four years at Barnard as meaningful and worthwhile as possible.

The Barnard Economics Society is an informal club in which students express their interest in economics. This is done through participating in discussions, attending lectures given by the faculty or well-known speakers, and visiting places in the city relevant to the field of economics.

The Barnard Bulletin

Building on the framework of previous years, the Barnard Bulletin had one of its best years ever in 1983-84. Staff membership increased as the paper continued to grow and reach out to more of the Barnard community. The depth of information provided by the paper increased as the news focus widened from not only reporting on the events that happened, but also to explaining why they happened. The features and reviews section continued to provide students with an informative and entertaining guide to the campus and city around them. The editorial board remained strong, dedicated, and creative, and was the vital factor in the improvement of the paper.

The future looks good for the Barnard Bulletin, as only one senior left the board when the editorship changed hands from Amelia A. Hart to Barby Kogon in the spring semester. Bulletin remains the source of information for the Barnard campus.

Vassar's President to Speak Tonight.

There is no piece of war work in preparation for the summer of more importance than the Training Camp for Nurses at Vassar College. Women graduated from college since and including the year of 1909 are eligible for training. On the evening of Friday, March 8th, this vital project is to be presented to those who are interested at the Women's University Club by President MacCracken of Vassar College and Miss Maxwell, head of the Presbyterian Hospital Training School. The Women's University Club, 106 East 52nd street, is also the place at which registrations for the training camp are received. An enormous registration is expected and those interested had better apply early.

"And Still Their Wonder Grew."

Was the fourth floor of Students' Hall singularly quiet last week-end? In the midst of Sing Song and Alumnae Day, did you feel that somewhere, somehow, someone was missing? We know you did, fair reader; and we don't mind telling you that the gap was caused by the absence from Barnard of the editor-in-chief, business manager and assistant editor of the BULLETIN. They were, in fact, basking in the sunshine of the Wellesley hills, and incidentally imbibing much invaluable wisdom.

The occasion was the yearly conference of the Association of News Magazines of Women's Colleges. We will not poison your mind with jealousy by telling you the details of our royal welcome and of the ensuing good time we had. Suffice it to say that Barnard War Service Corps for France.

The Associate Alumnae of Barnard College have authorized the formation of a Barnard War Service Corps, which will be managed by a Central Board of three, who will serve respectively as chairmen of three working committees, to be known as Finance, Publicity and Personnel.

The Central Board is empowered to furnish workers in any field of war service. At present there are two definite requests under consideration: one from the Y. M. C. A. for canteen workers with the U. S. army in France and the other from the American Red Cross for a reconstruction unit to work among the repatriated population in France.

Any further suggestions for other kinds of war work at home or abroad

The Ukrainian Club

The Barnard-Columbia Ukrainian Club is an active organization whose primary function is to provide cultural information for Columbia University. It sponsors annual events such as Easter egg exhibits, art shows, and embroidery displays as well as lectures and films. Since the club also serves a social function, it is involved in organizing ski trips, dances and other social events, attracting a sizeable percentage of non-Ukrainian members. More recently, members from the club have been raising funds, and with the assistance of private donations have succeeded in establishing a new course offered by Columbia University's History Department: 20th Century Ukraine. The course provides students with a unique opportunity to expand their knowledge of Ukrainian history.

Well, we haven't got around to blowing up Ferris Booth Hall yet, as planned. The big blast is tentatively rescheduled for April, 1984, so watch the Galactic Broadcasting Service network carefully this spring. Newsflash: According to the latest field of scientific research, the amount of information in the universe is a constant. The theory predicts a cancelling of information due to the discovery of Information Mechanics. We are hoping it will get rid of Vogon poetry. You say you never heard of Vogon poetry? See, it works! If you want more information on us before it all cancels out, we do actually have a lending library, a yearly convention in FBH (not in April) and other activities now and then, including a — we regret that this information has been cancelled.

Student Help for the Elderly

Student Help for the Elderly is a unique service on the University campus. Each year students visit elderly people on the Upper West Side. These students volunteer to shop and perform escort and companionship services. Student Help is managed by three to five undergraduate directors. They take referrals from social service agencies and attempt to match potential clients with students. Before our program takes a client, one of the directors makes as assessment visit to the client's home to explain the program. Students from any division of the Unviersity can work for SHE. Our agency offers a great opportunity to make friends with someone outside of the hectic college world. In addition, Student Help also sponsors a workshop each year on the special problems of aging.

Chinese Students' Union

The Chinese Students' Union of Columbia University is dedicated to achieving three main goals: to provide an insight into the Chinese culture and lifestyle for both Asians and non-Asians within the Columbia/Barnard Community, to supply a forum for issues affecting Asians both on and off campus, and to act in a sound capacity as an organization where students with similar cultural backgrounds meet. The Chinese Students' Club sponsors many events during the year ranging from parties to cultural workshops. The club also has organized its own athletic teams and a dance troupe. Their biggest event is the Chinese New Year Festival which attracts hundreds of people, including faculty members.

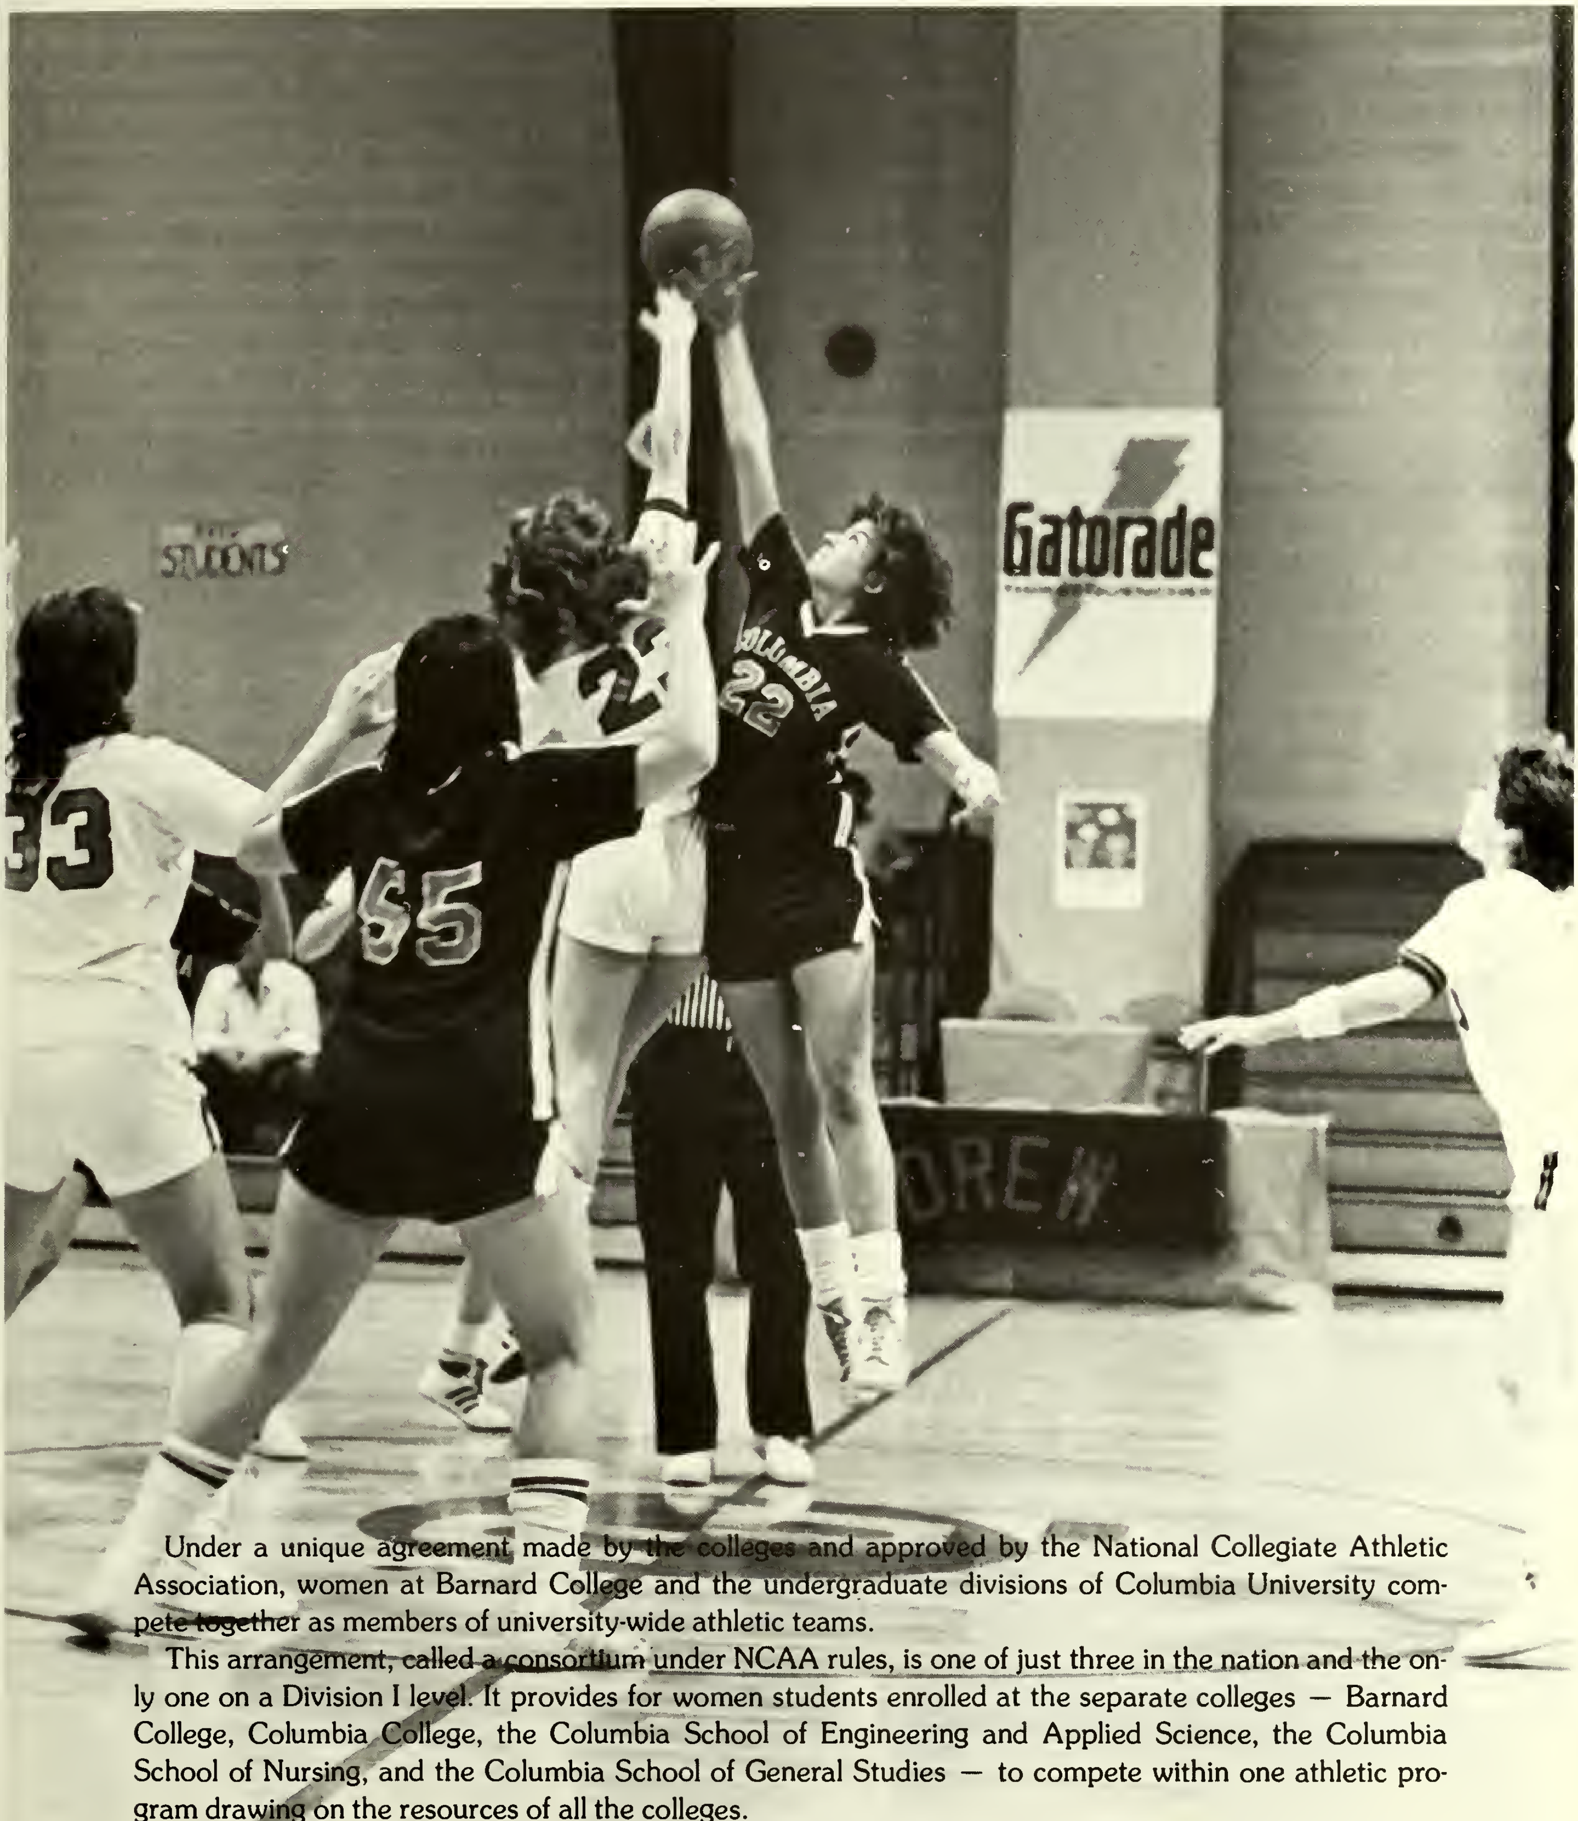
Consortium



Under a unique agreement made by the colleges and approved by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, women at Barnard College and the undergraduate divisions of Columbia University compete together as members of university-wide athletic teams.

This arrangement, called a consortium under NCAA rules, is one of just three in the nation and the only one on a Division I level. It provides for women students enrolled at the separate colleges — Barnard College, Columbia College, the Columbia School of Engineering and Applied Science, the Columbia School of Nursing, and the Columbia School of General Studies — to compete within one athletic program drawing on the resources of all the colleges.

The Consortium was built by developing and expanding upon an already established women's athletic program at Barnard. Both Barnard and Columbia believe that the Consortium creates an athletic program within the Ivy League far stronger than what either institution could offer individually.

Archery

The Columbia University Women's Archery Team is undefeated this year in both dual meets (4-0) and tournament competition. In dual meets no competitor from the opposing team has managed to break into the top 3 places. The individual competition was much rougher at the Eastern Indoor FITA tournament (the major fall tournament in the east), but Columbia's depth showed in its first place team finish.

Columbia competes in local dual competition under the auspices of the Metropolitan Collegiate Archery League, which consists of teams from Lehman College, Baruch College, Steven's Institute of Technology, and Queensborough Community College. In their first competition of the year the Columbia women took the first three places. Julie Turner B'85, 1983 New York State collegiate champion, led the lions with a 226 (of a possible 300). She was followed by Leila Lau B'84 scoring 226 points and Fanny Chan with 219.

The same threesome exchanged places in the November 16 competition against Lehman with Chan taking first (242) followed by Turner and Lau.

Chan took first in the November 30 contest against Stevens when the Lions swept the first five places. Her 229 was followed by Cathy Doviak's 288, Turner's 226, Deki Choden's 217, and Lau's 204.

Columbia again swept the first five places against Queensborough on December 7 in the last league competition for the fall. Turner was first (236) followed by Doviak (223), Lau (215), Chan (202) and Kim Lee B'84 with 151.

The Eastern Indoor Tournament held in Reading, Pennsylvania was the first chance for the Lions to face teams outside of the league since the Collegiate Nationals last May in Colorado. The individual competition was dominated by James Madison (1982 national champions), but Columbia's depth won it a gold medal for the women's team. The team was led by Julie Turner (450 of a possible 600), with Leila Lau scoring 417, Kim Lee (407), and Cathy Doviak (383).

In combination with the men's club the Columbia mixed team has a 4-1 record in dual meets and tournaments, its only defeat coming at the hands of Queensborough.

"You're young and you can make it." That's how Beth Knobel, who works for the New York Times, feels. As a campus correspondent, she reports to the newspaper various items of interest concerning Barnard.

Although Beth began slowly when she first received the job, today she has more freedom in her writing. "The longer I have the job the more I learn what I can do with it." Beth writes on such diverse topics as women's issues, real estate, and basketball. "The New York Times is really an exciting place to work," Beth enthusiastically adds.

Beth has been actively involved in journalism for quite some time. From January to September of 1983 she served as News Editor for the Columbia Spectator. She resigned, she says, to have more time to freelance, study, and be with friends. She had previously worked on the Spectator as a reporter and as night editor, learning "how to deal with people and run a newspaper." In addition, Beth has worked for The Villager and The Credit Union News. Last summer she worked as a paid intern at the Ladies Home Journal.

Beth has obviously spent much time and effort in the field of journalism during her years at Barnard. According to Beth, "when things are important to you, you don't mind working for them."

For Lisa Maxwell, being involved was never a problem. As President of McAC, an organization providing students of the Barnard/Columbia community with a multitude of diverse social events, Lisa's main goal is to "get students involved in the campus to remind them that fun is as important as studying." Lisa began her freshman year as a commuter knowing no one and feeling isolated. "I thought that the only way to enjoy myself and get the most out of school was to become involved. I began with McAC. I was elected head of the Commuter Action Committee in my sophomore year and continued with McAC through all four years of college."

Lisa feels the most difficult problem at Barnard is getting students to participate in activities. Often one may end up running a one-woman show. Meeting people and keeping Barnard students active helps motivate Lisa and make her job enjoyable.

According to Lisa, McAC is important because the apathy at Barnard may discourage students. "I feel that McAC provides students with opportunities to get involved. We try to engulf all aspects of McIntosh life in an effort to enrich a student's college experience." Despite all her hard work, Lisa enjoys her job. "Although you can not help everyone, if one out of every 100 students enjoys herself, I feel I've done something worthwhile. It makes me happy."

In her junior year, Loretta Logan decided to run for the position of Coordinator of the Celebration of Black Womanhood, an event sponsored by the Barnard Organization of Black Women (BOBW). Instead, she was nominated and elected President of BOBW, a Barnard organization which promotes Black consciousness and awareness on campus by sponsoring various cultural, political, academic and social events. As President of this organization, Loretta has gained the experience of leadership and has learned to work efficiently with others.

Loretta says that in working for the organization, she has acquired a feeling of self-achievement. "I'm doing something that's really worthwhile for myself and for others." In addition to fulfilling her duties as President, which include overlooking the workings of the organization, and being responsible for all planned events, Loretta sits on the United Minority Board. This board consists of representatives from different minority organizations on campus. "I've learned a lot this year. There's more to school life than academics."

Loretta plans to attend medical school in the fall. She says that Barnard has been very important to her. "I love the atmosphere of Barnard and will miss the professors, my friends, everything about Barnard. This has been an important part of my life."

I've shut the door on yesterday and thrown the key away; tomorrow holds no fears for me, since I have found today.

When Su McCarthy spotted Sue Seferian in the McIntosh Talent Show in their sophomore year, TMB history began. Since then "That Motown Band," made up of ten members playing old songs from Motown, has performed all over campus creating a large following.

"The first rehearsal was pandemonium," Sue remembers. "No one knew what to do. I couldn't even turn on the mike!" After many rehearsals the band received their first gig in Johnson Hall. Sue was so nervous that she lost her voice. "A band member had to get me drunk. I sounded like Bonnie Tyler."

Besides vocals, Su McCarthy also does the costuming and makeup for the group. She claims that she and Sue are just "two girls who like to get up and get crazy." Su feels that part of the reason the group is such a success is that "there's no way you can have a bad time dancing to Motown!" As for the group's name, Sue claims that after their first show everyone was saying "Did you hear that Motown Band?" Someone suggested the name and the band adopted it unanimously.

Both Su(e)s remember one of their most exciting gigs when half the band escaped from security. "Some members in the band decided to scale the McIntosh gate instead of going around. Security spotted them and chased them into McIntosh. They ran over to the stage, grabbed their instruments and started playing. The cops never found them."

Some problems may arise for the group's future because many members are graduating this year. However, Sue is not worried. "Whatever happens, all roads will lead back to TMB."

I would like to thank my parents for all that they have done for me.

In her freshman year, Bea Krain was surprised to find no pre-law club at Barnard. After consulting various professors and deans, Bea scheduled the first meeting of what was to be called the Elizabeth Cady Stanton Pre-Law Society.

With the assistance of Dean Esther Rowland and the enthusiasm of other Barnard students including Helen Catsichtis, Lucianna Locorotondo and Christine Papamichael, the E.C.S. Pre-Law Society was formed and chartered by Undergrad to provide focus to pre-law students. Some of the functions of the club, according to Christine, Vice-President, are "to provide information to pre-law students concerning the LSAT and law school applications, present various types of legal professions, and improve students' relationships with faculty, deans and alumnae in order to establish contacts and expand interests."

Lucy, Treasurer of the club, described the types of events the club has sponsored. She said that in order to learn more about the different angles of a legal profession, panels were scheduled with Barnard alumnae who have attended law school. "The panels are very important for students planning to go to law school. It's an opportunity to ask questions and learn from someone else's experiences in law school and the legal profession."

Helen, Publicity Director, was surprised, like Bea, that a pre-law club did not exist. Helen feels the club is vital in helping students make choices regarding law school. "I was not sure if I should go to law school. But, after attending the various panels of alumnae and law students, I am sure that law school is the correct route for me."

Bea, Christine, Helen and Lucy are responsible for the current success of the E.C.S. Pre-Law Society. Although they are all graduating seniors, they are not worried about the club's future. As Bea says, "Although the four of us are graduating, I am confident that our successors will continue our newly founded tradition."

Much of the current success of Freshman Orientation is attributed to Georgia Pestana, Barnard Coordinator for Orientation 1983. Orientation is traditionally a student's first introduction to campus life, serving as a bridge between leaving home and entering the world of college. Full of parties, academic events and trips throughout New York City, Orientation is usually remembered by students as the best week ever experienced at college.

Georgia worked with the Columbia College and the School of Engineering coordinators to plan the program that introduced 1,800 new students to the Columbia University vicinity. Georgia and the other two coordinators supervised 30 committee members who did the actual planning for the program. Georgia says the most difficult part of her work was her conscious effort not to do the planning. She wanted to help organize the parties and events yet understood that her job was to supervise the committee's work.

Georgia remembers the good times and the not-so-good times of Orientation. She says she enjoyed herself and feels successful in her efforts. There were problems however. As Georgia says, "Any time the interests of three different schools must be served, there are bound to be difficulties." The coordinators disagreed and argued causing her relationship with them to be varied from day to day. Although she had fun, it was a 24-hour job lasting from January to August.

Georgia looks back on Freshman Orientation 1983 and considers it "the best summer I have ever spent." There are lingering rememberances as freshmen continue to recognize her and tell her how much they enjoyed Freshman Orientation.

As a senior, Aroza Sanjana served as the President of Student Government Association which, according to Aroza, is "the entity in charge of all student activities and student representation." In this position Aroza "stands up for students because of a sense of responsibility." She feels she can represent students' views and can utilize her position to change unfair circumstances.

Aroza stresses principles when making decisions. As Aroza says, "Making a decision has to do with principles; principles govern my thinking. Without principles and standards for making decisions, one can not be fair." Aroza also stresses the importance of positive growth in the Student Government Association. "The officers of Student Government must keep the wheels turning or face stagnation. Each year more and more must be accomplished; there must be constant growth."

Aroza feels her most significant endeavor while at Barnard is the opening of the Barnard Student Store. As Vice-President of Student Activities, Aroza worked during her junior year, with the other board members of Undergrad to open the store. "Barnard has recognized it as a viable entity," she says. "The store has helped in many ways to reaffirm Barnard's identity." Students can now buy t-shirts that say "BARNARD" instead of "COLUMBIA." "Barnard is going through a transition; the student store has helped make that transition smoother."

Aroza feels good about graduating. She feels there is enough talent to carry on anything she has left undone and feels she will leave Barnard with an even stronger Student Government Association.

In the past two years, Barnard's Board of Trustees has been faced with major questions and issues. With the recent advent of co-education at Columbia, Barnard has had to deal with such issues as mergers and the identity of the college as a whole. Avis Hinkson is one of the two student representatives to the Board of Trustees. She ran for the position out of concern for the possibility of the merger between Barnard and Columbia. Avis was elected to the two year position in her sophomore year. At that time, the major issues concerning the Board were the consortium of the Barnard and Columbia Physical Education Departments and the possibility of keeping Barnard dormitories open during winter break.

As a representative to the Board of Trustees, Avis communicates students' concerns to the Trustees. Although the student representative does not have voting power, Avis is able to voice her opinion and that of the student body. In this way, the Trustees are alerted to students' wants and concerns that may have otherwise remained unknown. The position has been an exciting one for Avis. "It has opened me up to seeing the way decisions are made. I have seen how a college this size is run."

Avis is currently a Resident Assistant in 49 Claremont. This position has been invaluable for her in learning students' feelings about Barnard. Avis' feelings about Barnard are positive, "Barnard was the right choice for me. It has allowed me to grow."

The McIntosh Activities Council wishes to extend to our president Lisa Maxwell as well as our committee chairmen Raquel Rosenfeld and Carr D'Angelo and the class of '84 the best of luck and success for the future.

25,000 Members of THE ASSOCIATE ALUMNAE OF BARNARD COLLEGE Welcome the Class of 1984 to Membership

Congratulations, and welcome to the Barnard alumnae network. Through the Associate Alumnae, you can find out what's going on at Barnard, where your classmates are, and how to locate an alumna who shares your career interest. You can attend special events and conferences, audit courses, swim in the Barnard pool, join a regional alumnae club, use the library, travel abroad, win a fellowship, and take an active part in alumnae affairs. As an alumna, you will be receiving the quarterly magazine, Barnard Alumnae, which regularly reports news from all the classes as well as the latest developments on campus. Be sure to keep the Alumnae Office informed of your current address and send us news of yourself and your current activities. We look forward to sharing ideas, opinions, and interests with you.

One Final Word . . . to Lisa and Sally: a Merry Christmas . . . to Heather: O Tay Panky . . . to Bea: a German salute . . . to Rebecca: a boost . . . to Jean: a line or two . . . to Colleen: a few figures . . . to Lisa and Margot: a new setting . . . to Priscilla: not just another blurb . . . to Karin and Anna: the proper title . . . to Cy: it's 7:02 . . . to Robin: one more word . . . and to Gaby: a parting shot! God bless the Empire State Building!

Dear Class of 1984,

There might be one among you who recalls the limerick I delivered at your Orientation Convocation on August 28, 1980:

'84 is beginning to loom;
Mr. Orwell foresaw it with gloom:
You'd each be a parrot,
Regardless of merit —
George was a prophet of doom!

With nary a tinge of regret,
I can see that the man was all wet!
Let's dance and let's sing
As you each do your thing —
Your class will be the best yet!

It is now obvious that I am a better forecaster than Orwell, for you are an unruly group of independent thinkers and a wonderful class! And I think I know where he went wrong:

When Orwell predicted our fate,
He was wrong on more than the date!
If we're ever controlled,
I predict we'll behold
BIG SISTER as head of the state!

What I really wish for each of you is an active, useful life, full of new challenges and accomplishments, but not so busy that you can't come back to see us often.

Affectionately, Barbara S. Schmitter
